Gus Weiser Back from Air Battles On African Front Tells of Talks With German, Italian Prisoners

By IRENE ALEXANDER

U. S. Army Pilot Gus Weiser, just home from North Africa, where he took part in the bombing and strafing of the retreating German lines, is back in Carmel this week accompanied by his wife, the former Fordre Fraties, daughter of Police Chief Roy Fraties. This big, quiet, likable, and very young man, who only yesterday—1939-40, to be exact—played center on the Monterey high school football team, speaks with the understatement of modest reticence when he sums up his experiences and exploits of the past months as "extremely interesting."

The details of that incident at Barksdale Field in early March, when Pilot Gus remained at the controls of his disabled plane until the last member of his crew had jumped to safety, were never publicized by its hero.

The plane, a B-26, had taken off at night, with a crew of six, and had reached 4,000 feet when one of its motors cracked. It lost altitude fast. By the time the co-pilot left his seat, it was down to 2,000. One by one, the men crawled back to the trap in the bomb bay and jumped, while Gus held the ship on a fairly even keel. The radioman was last, calling back the hour —8.26, over his shoulder. At 1,000 feet, with the landing wheels blocking his own exit, Gus left the controls and the plane went into a tailspin, setting up a centrifugal force against which he had to battle back to the bomb bay, losing precious minutes. The plane was only 5 or 6 hundred feet from the ground when he finally jumped, and as he pulled the cord of his parachute, the plane shot past him with a zing, struck and exploded, bursting immediately into flames.

He went to Miami shortly after that, then to South America, and on to North Africa, where he and another B-26 went into active duty, assigned to reconnaissance and bombing. By that time, says Gus, the Allied Nations had achieved air superiority.

"It was like shooting fish most of the time," he commented. "There were some Italian planes —though most of them were German. They'd come out after us once in a while, but it didn't take long for them to quit cold. They weren't taking any chances. We encountered very accurate anti-

Junior Commando Training Is New Feature of Recreation Program; Swimming Parties at P. G. Pool

Swimming parties in the Pacific Grove pool, a Junior Commando Training Course, folk dancing and pottery making are among the new features of this year's recreation program which starts next Tuesday and continues until August 15; Delos Bagby, director, announced this week.

There will be the usual supervised play on the school athletic fields, the weekly dance for the older boys and girls in Sunset Cafeteria, tennis, basketball and twilight baseball.

Miss Stella Schnabel, Sunset first grade teacher, will be Bagby's assistant, taking charge of the girls' supervised play and games. She will also conduct group singing with the assistance of Mrs. Jane Yates. David Marrs, is to be in charge of tennis, while Mrs. Paul Beygrau will instruct in pottery making. Arrangements are being made for leaders to take charge of a glider club, a bird study group, and a harmonica band.

Financing of the program was assured Wednesday night when the city council voted $250 and implied that if further funds were needed, they could be raised from the same source. The P.-T.A. has pledged $100 with a similar promise of additional assistance. Almost $90 has been contributed by high school students. The expenditures for last year's program was less than $450, but this year the committee is desirous of establishing a kindergarten for preschool children according to Councilman Fred Godwin, a plan that

Fred U. McIndoe

Carmel mourns today the loss of one of its war heroes. Fred U. McIndoe died at his home on San Antonio street early Thursday morning, as much a casualty of World War I as if he had fallen at Argonne, for the shrapnel he carried in his body for twenty-six years made necessary a series of operations last fall from which he was unable to rally.

But there were twenty-six fruitful years in which, despite periods of illness, he made a place in the community for his wife and son, in which he won the friendship and respect of his fellow townsmen, in which he served the community as generously as he had served his country in 1918.

He was born in Baron, Wisconsin in 1901, joined the militia when he was sixteen years old and saw action in the brush with Villa in the Mexican revolution. When war broke out with Germany, his division was among the first to arrive in France where he took part in five different offensives, was gassed three times, was 21 days at Argonne and received the wound that finally led to his death.

He came to Carmel in 1925 with his wife and young son, worked in John Anderson's Grocery on Ocean avenue and later for E. H. Ewig until six years ago when he opened his own business on Dolores street. Last year he was elected to the City Council. He was also a director of the airport board, a past commander of the American Legion and a member of the Lions Club.

In addition to his wife, Hazel, and son Frederick, Jr., he is survived by his sisters, Mrs. Frances Hilderbrant, Los Angeles, Mrs. Clare Rilette, Portland, Mrs. Rawley Blake, Minneapolis, and his brother, Lt. Charles McIndoe in the Marine Corps.

Funeral arrangements are pending the arrival of his son who is on his way home from Corpus Christi where he is receiving advanced navy flying training.

To Bring That Day Nearer

Monday is Flag Day. This year the federal government is asking Americans to express their affection for the symbol of their country in a practical way, to buy additional bonds to finance the war.

It is a battle Flag at present. As such it has never known defeat, and we are justly proud of it. But the great majority of us are eager to see it again as a symbol of a country at peace, its people working in harmony with other nations of the world toward a better way of life and a higher standard of living. Most of us are making regular, budgeted purchases of bonds, but today, Saturday and Monday, if possible, we should buy that extra bond as a gesture of loyalty and devotion to the Flag under which we live in freedom, and to hasten that day of peace when we can share our freedom with others.

Logan Vandervort, Wounded in Naval Engagement, Home with Story of Experiences in South Pacific

Home on a ten-day leave from Mare Island Hospital, Carmel's first wounded veteran of South Pacific naval action to return, Logan Vandervort, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Vandervort of Fourth and Dolores, had much to say of Waikiki Beach, Fiji natives and Australian girls and little of the harrowing sea battles out of which he came with an injured shoulder and shell-shocked nerves.

He was deeply aggrieved about Waikiki Beach. "It's not like what you read about," he complained. "A fellow has to walk miles out to get neck deep, and first thing you know you're stubbing a toe on coral rocks."

He made his acquaintance of Waikiki shortly after Pearl Harbor, when the Navy took over the Royal Hawaiian Hotel and military law governed the Island of Oahu. It was on Magazine Island, a part of Oahu, where young Vandervort attended torpedo school, and it was later, in the capacity of torpedoman that he went through the experience of a naval engagement.

A former employe of Joe's Taxi, Logan Vandervort and his family have been residents of Carmel for seven years. A brother, Dale, attends Sunset school, and another, Gene Vandervort, was in this year's graduating class from Carmel high. Logan joined the navy and left for boot camp 17 months ago. In the interim his duties have afforded him glimpses of Sidney, Melbourne, Auckland in New Zealand, the port of Suva in the Fiji Islands, New Caledonia and Guadalcanal.

Sailor Vandervort found Sidney and Melbourne wondrously hos-

WE HAVE THIS TO LOOK FORWARD TO

The war makes it impossible for Carmel to have its Bach Festival this summer, but we shall not forget Bach's music as it was forgotten for a hundred years and then brought back to life through the love and enthusiasm of the young Mendelssohn whose successful efforts to produce the St. Matthew Passion are told on the feature page of this issue by Eloise Carwyle.

One cannot read the article without emotion. Whether the feeling engendered is, "Alas, see what we have lost!" or "We have this to look forward to, a glorious revival of our Bach Festival after the war," depends on the individual.

New Children's Librarian Makes Up Summer List

A new children's librarian has ordered a "super-duper" list of new books which promise many quiet hours of enjoyment for Carmel's younger inhabitants this summer.

Miss Margaret Butler, a graduate of the University of California library course, recently in the children's department of the Kern county library system, has been appointed children's librarian for the Harrison Memorial Library. Her first act on arriving was to compile the first list of books for summer reading. But the books enumerated below are only the beginning. There are more to come as summer progresses.

For older boys and girls: Swing Shift by Howard Brier. When young Dave Marshal took a job in a great shipyard, he had no idea he was walking straight into mystery and adventure.

When the Typhoon Blows by Elizabeth F. Lewis. Fifteen year-old Li San-djiu found life dangerous and exciting when the Japanese invaded his village.

Patterns on the Wall by Elizabeth Yates, a romantic tale of Jared's undying hope to wed Jennet, though she spurned him for a wealthy farmer.

Walter Reed, Doctor in Uniform by L. N. Wood, an inspiring biography of this courageous man who faced unbelievable difficulties when he set himself to solve the yellow fever problem.

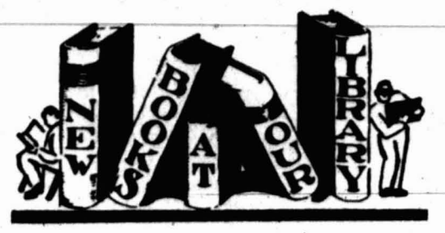
Intermediate age: Banjo the Crow by Theodora Dubois. Tommy wanted a pet more than anything else, but he didn't dream of one with as many tricks as Banjo the Crow.

Andries by Hilda Van Stockum, a gay story of Holland—about tulip gardens, tree houses, and a lively family who brought happiness to a sad little boy.

Up the Hill by Marguerite De Angeli. Aniela and her friends of many countries had a school party, with native costumes, food and dancing.

Younger boys and Girls: A Yard for John by Eleanor Clymer. Little John longed for some real mud to play in rather than the smooth grass of the city park, so John's father set off to find a real back yard.

Little Navajo Bluebird by Ann Nolan Clark. Doli, the little Bluebird, found the life of an Indian child a great and beautiful adventure.



Non-fiction: Letters from England, by Margaret C. Banning; The Age of Enterprise, by T. C. Cochran; The Magical Realm, by Kathleen Coyle; Summary of the World Federation Plan, by Ely Culbertson; Round Trip to Russia, by Walter Graebner; Captain of the Andes, by Margaret Harrison; The Silent War, by Jon B. Jansen, and others; Vichy, by Leon Marchal; Syrian Yankee, by Salom Rizk; The Logic of Belief, by David E. Trueblood; Salute to Victory, by Linton Wells; The Skin of Our Teeth, by Thornton Wilder; Tunis Expedition, by Darryl Zanuck.

Fiction: Mr. Lincoln's Wife, by Anne Colver; Winter's Tales, by Karen Blixen; Running to Paradise, by John Lodwick; Sweet Chariot, by Frank Baker; Search for a Key, by Walter Duranty; The Voyage of Captain Bart, by John Erskine.

Lions Have Wow Barbecue at Gene Ricketts'

Appreciative members of the Lions Club are still congratulating Gene Ricketts for arranging the best dinner meeting they have had since the organization of the club, a barbecue at the Ricketts home Tuesday evening.

Twenty-two members and four guests gathered around the barbecue pit at 6:30 o'clock for hot dogs, chili beans, mixed green salad. Entertainment was furnished by two enlisted men from Del Monte Pre-Flight school, Ed Torres, musician's mate, second class, played the clarionet, the guitar and sang Spanish songs, and Ray Ross, yeoman, second class, who put on a novelty number with spoons, and also played the guitar.

Guests, in addition to the sailors, were Mark Keller, president elect of the Monterey Rotary Club and Arthur Templeman, of the Monterey Lions Club.

OPA CHECKS PENINSULA

Inspectors from the OPA office in San Francisco made the rounds of Peninsula retail stores this week checking on price violations. In some cases, poultry prices were found to be out of line. Several meat dealers were selling lower grade meats at first grade prices. Some furniture dealers were found to be infringing. A few merchants had failed to mark goods with ceiling prices. However, violations were the exception rather than the rule, and in most cases due to incomplete information on regulations.

Council Urged To Ban Obscene Magazine Sales

Over twenty representatives of Peninsula churches and organizations appeared at the city council meeting Wednesday night in support of a petition requesting the council to enact an ordinance prohibiting the sale of publications or materials which have been denied second class mailing privileges because of violations of the postal obscenity statutes.

Miss L. L. Turner, representing the Monterey Peninsula Council of Church Women, in urging action on the part of the council to prohibit newsstand sales of periodicals that the government has ruled were too obscene to pass through the mails, pointed out that there are ordinances and state laws in other localities throughout the country that prevent this material from getting into the hands of young people, and that it is the opinion of church and civic leaders on the Peninsula that banning sale of obscene publications will help prevent an increase in juvenile de-

$62.50 Monthly Asked of City for Information Bureau

Financial assistance for the Community Information Bureau was sought of the city council Wednesday night in a letter from the Carmel Business association in which it was proposed that the Business association take over responsibility for the operation of the bureau, hiring Mrs. Gunnar Norberg to operate it on a fixed salary and requesting that the city bear half the expense by contributing $62.50 a month.

Mayor McCreery stated that there were legal obstacles to the city's undertaking such an obligation, that it has been the policy of the council to effect economies where ever possible to increase the reserve for needs that might arise from war conditions, and that a limited group, the business people, received the greatest benefit from the Information Bureau whereas the returns were slight to the tax payers at large who were being called upon to help finance it.

Councilman L. L. Dewar urged that action on the request be postponed until a later time, stating that he believed that the council was not fully informed as to the scope of the bureau's activities, proposing that a representative of the Business Association be invited to attend the next council meting and state the case for the Bureau.

McCreery and Councilman Bernard Rowntree pointed out that in the past two months since the matter had first been brought to the councilmen's attention there had been ample opportunity for anyone interested in the bureau to appear before the council, but that no one had taken the trouble to do so. However, they conceded to Councilman Dewar and postponed action until the next regular meeting.

First Church Elects Daisette McKenzie As New President

The Christian Science Board of Directors Monday placed "prayer" at the top of the list of defensive and offensive weapons that free-thinking peoples are counting upon to win the global war against oppression and suppression.

In a statement to the annual meeting of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Massachusetts, the Directors first emphasized the word "prayer," then followed with the term "miracle of deliverance" which is to be accepted, they said, as the logical answer to righteous prayer.

The Directors also announced the election of Mrs. Daisette D. S. McKenzie of Cambridge, Massachusetts, as President of The Mother Church for the ensuing year, succeeding Mrs. Elizabeth F. Norwood, of Brookline, Massachusetts.

"We could hardly get ashore," he explained. "They mobbed us on the docks, inviting us home for dinner, giving parties for us and all that. They're awfully nice, friendly people. The women wear flaring dresses and big, floppy hats. There's not enough calcium in Australian water, so their teeth aren't good; but they are all bigger-boned than American girls."

New Zealanders, he reported, have a distinct allergy to being called "Limeys", and the way to distinguish a married resident of New Caledonia from the single ones is by noting the top-knots of the benedicts, since marriage gives them the privilege of bleaching out a tuft of ordinarily kinky black hair to a bright, contrasting red. New Caledonia natives live in fairly modern adobe houses, make their living by producing cocoanuts and pineapples and wear blouses and skirts of vivid hue.

At Suva, in the Fiji Islands, the inhabitants swarmed to the dock, selling beads, rings and other trinkets. It was here, Logan Vanvort states, that he had the surprise of his life. He asked his way of a little group of natives he encountered, among whom was one with bare, splay feet, garbed in what resembled a woman's black skirt, a white blouse and wide, beaded green belt. To his amazement, the man replied to his questions in the most perfect, cultivated English he had heard in his travels, and turned out to be a member of the Royal Police Force, an organization which, despite the oddity of its uniform, demands hand-picked men of special background and training.

In reply to questions about his combat duty, Seaman Vandervort smiled a little proudly.

"She weathered it!" he announced. (So it's true that a sailor thinks first of his ship.)

Then he went on: "My job was firing the torpedoes. It's hard to tell what it was like, being in a sea battle. There was a steady roar, like a terrible thunder storm, and at night the fireworks go on all around you. It's more than a fellow who hasn't seen it can really imagine—bigger than your wildest imagination. Then, when it's over, everything seems suddenly too quiet. Nobody talks—just moves around in a kind of a daze for a while."

There was an act of heroism, too, in the thick of battle, on which eye witness Vandervort was glad to report, both for its bearing on the high morale of his fellow seamen and because of its happy ending. He saw one of his crew mates leap overboard into flaming oil to rescue a wounded sailor unable to battle his way out. "They're both okay now," he added.

This week he returns to Mare Island Hospital for further treatment, after which his plans are dependent upon Uncle Sam.

"I hope you will put in," he insisted, "that the happiest day of all my life was when I came back to Carmel."

Students Sign Up For Red Cross Sewing, Knitting

Sewing machines, worktables, scissors, and pins are being moved to Room 11 at Sunset school to make the art room into a good workroom for production of articles needed by the armed forces. Girls who like to sew and knit are urged to join the production corps at the school each Monday and Wednesday morning from 10 to 12 o'clock. There will be work on hand from the Red Cross, from Bundles United and from other agencies whenever a request is received for work the young people can do.

Knitters who expect to help out at the workroom this summer include Joan Dekker, Pamela Dormody, Betty Dougherty, Beverly Dowgiallo, Betty Ruland, Ester van Niel, Marjorie Wermuth, Lila Whitaker, Sunny Cook, Patricia Davis, and Becky Bell. Some of the girls who will sew are Irene Erickson, Ruth Funchess, Du Val Roberts, Betty Ruland, Betty Dougherty, and Sunny Cook. There will be plenty of room for all who wish to help in this way, and if there is interest enough shown the workroom will be open at other hours than these announced.

Requests for help from the workroom should be sent to Mrs. Horace Dormody or Mrs. Helen Cowan Wood at Sunset school.

Council Takes Action to Curb Fortune Tellers

Action was initiated at Wednesday night's council meeting to protect the city from a repetition of last year's difficulties with the Gypsy fortune tellers when City Attorney Peter Ferrante was instructed to draw up an ordinance empowering the council to pass on applications for fortune telling licenses as it now has power to pass on applications to hang business signs and permission to remove trees.

The matter was brought to the attention of the council by Councilman Bernard Rowntree who reported that in the past month five individuals had applied to the tax collector for licenses to conduct fortune telling establishments in Carmel, that two already exist and that an increase in number would create a problem, especially if itinerant fortune tellers were allowed to set up shop as the gypsies were last year. He pointed out that according to police experience fortune telling on the part of itinerants is often used as a bait to attract the credulous who become victims of bunco games.

A special meeting will be called to pass the ordinance as an emergency measure as soon as the city attorney draws it up.

SIREN TEST

The long quavering blast of the fire siren that you will hear on Wednesday morning at 10 is not a warning to dig in for an air raid, though it is the official air raid signal. The Civilian Defense authorities have picked that time for testing the siren to discover how it would work in case such signal were needed.

Sirens of the other Peninsula cities will be tested at the same time.

Sunset Cafeteria Loses Money, School Board Rejoices

The high school cafeteria closed the school year with a cash balance of $361.66, enough to pay all bills and return the $300 borrowed from Sunset cafeteria early in the school term.

However, the school board decided at its Tuesday night's meeting that since Sunset cafeteria has earned a profit for itself beyond the margin of comfort for an institution that is supposed to be non profit making, $1215.25, it would leave the $300 with the high school cafeteria for an operation fund when school starts in the fall.

There was consideralbe rejoicing when it was announced that in the past month, Sunset cafeteria has lost $8.00. This was accomplished through bargain days when the main dish was offered students for five cents.

Other business of the meeting was the appointing of Mrs. Esther Clark to manage the high school cafeteria next term. She was assistant manager of the Sunset cafeteria this term and has had similar experience in Florida schools.

Uncle Sam Buys Pretties for WAAC Nieces

Women and clothes are synonymous. With that thought in mind, the designers working for Uncle Sam set about to create a uniform for members of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps, that would incorporate smartness and durability. Their success is evident in the expertly fitted uniforms, the contrasting shoes, handbag and gloves, all of style and quality not easily surpassed. In fact the ensemble allotted each WAAC when she reports for duty would cost a woman in civilian life well over $250.

The Army believes members of their Women's Corps should appear feminine first and foremost, therefor they encourage the moderate use of lipstick, rouge, powder and nail polish. Of course, not to be overdone. Hairdos are optional, but there is one ruling, the hair must be well above the collar.

It's plainly seen, that when a woman dons the uniform of the WAAC, she forfeits none of her rights to femininity.

Interested women, who are desirous of serving with the WAAC should contact WAAC headquarters, 440 Market street, San Francisco, California, telephone YUkon 1935.

Boy Scouts Hold Court of Honor

Troops 86 and 39 of Carmel held a Court of Honor last May 26. Lt. Keck of the Del Monte Pre-flight highlighted the program with a thrilling set of slides on the U. S. Navy at war.

There were many awards given and among them were: Star Scout, Eric Leffingwell of 86: First Class awards were given to Clayton Neill, Earl Stanley, and Daniel Bell of 86 and Hunter Lauer of 39. Merit Badges were given to Eric Leffingwell and Clayton Neill of 86 and Martin Katz of 39. Second Class was awarded Carroll Briggs and Mike Monahan of 86 and Rod Dewar of 39. Emergency Service Apprentice Scouts awards, a new branch of Scouting, dealing directly with the armed forces were awarded Clayton Neill and Eric Leffingwell, both of 86. An Air Scout award, another new branch of Scouts, was awarded Clayton Neill.

Some forty odd parents and thirty Scouts were present.

The Honor Patrol flag was awarded to the Hawk Patrol of 86 although the Pioneers gave a good fight.

Master of Ceremonies was Mr. Melville Johns of Carmel. Scoutmasters C. C. Briggs of 86 and David Marrs of 39 and also Kenny Roberts who is Sea Scoutmaster of the Sea Scouts.

Scouts transferred from other troops were Robert Wilkins and Treat Arnold and were warmly welcomed to Troop 86.

New Scouts Tom Handley, John Pherson, of 86 and Jim Brettman and Ed Siefert of 39 were also welcomed to Scouting. Following the meeting the Sea Scouts of Carmel demonstrated some life jackets which they had made.

June 12, both troops will go to Camp Esselen at Big Sur for the annual summer camp. Some twenty boys are planning to attend the camp this year from Carmel.

Many of the boys deserve great credit for their work in Scouts and also the two Scoutmasters who have had great difficulties confronting them. Many people think of the Boy Scouts as an inactive organization in Carmel, but the Scouts and Scoutmasters have tried to do their best and help this community in the past year.

Puppets Coming To Town at the Golden Bough

The young of Carmel—in years and in spirit—are getting a break this summer. The puppets have arrived: those delightful little people who travel about uncomplainingly in a trunk and pop out, ready to respond with spirit and humor to the slightest quirk of a finger.

The Walter Scott Marionette Theatre has established itself in what used to be the lobby of the famous old Golden Bough on Ocean avenue, and opens with the old folk play "It's None Too Easy" at 2:30 matinee on Saturday, June 12th, to be followed by an evening performance at 8.

A large cast, drawn from the entire company of 75 puppets, has been well rehearsed in its roles, and much hilarity is to be provided by the action.

Puppeteers are Mr. and Mrs. Scott and their young son, Hilton. Mr. Scott makes the amusing little figures, Mrs. Scott writes the scripts, and all three assist in the designing and painting of the elaborate sets and costumes. There are four other plays in their repertoire: Puss in Boots, Aladdin, Goldilocks and the Three Bears and King Midas. For the past nine years the Scott Marionettes have been welcome visitors throughout California, playing to delighted audiences in the Pasadena Playhouse, the Berkeley Women's City Club and at the Dominican Convent at San Rafael.

Red Cross Bulletins

By MRS. FRANCES DOUD

Because they have proven themselves to be of inestimable value in all jobs so far assigned them, Carmel's Red Cross Nurse's Aides are to be used in an ever widening field of activity.

In addition to regular duties at the Peninsula Community Hospital, they are assisting the Public School Nurse, as well as giving two days a week at the Monterey County Hospital in Salinas, where they work in the wards—eight Aides to each of four wards.

The new program is to include many more public health projects. Nurse's Aides will assist at the Child's Health Conferences held by the County at Bayview School, the House of the Four Winds, Del Monte Grove and Seaside schools, meeting once a month and conducting a clinic.

Nurse's Aides will go to the physical examinations at public schools when requested by the school. They will give ten or twelve half days per month for five or six months. They will assist in the immunization program in the schools, three and one half days a year in each school, and with the nurse inspection in the school when requested by the school nurse.

This increase in activities naturally creates a greater demand for more Nurse's Aides. A new course is to be offered in Carmel about July first, for which volunteers are urged to enroll at once at Red Cross headquarters on Dolores street, so that the Nurse's Aide committee may be able to detrmine as soon as possible how many will take the course, and to set a definite date for starting classes. Application must be made and signed in person.

Women who have taken this training are as enthusiastic about the work they are doing as are the nurses and patients for whom they are doing it. Actually they are fulfilling one of the most vital needs of this war in that they are relieving the trained nurses, so desperately needed by the armed forces and civilians alike, for more specialized and technical duties. Yet the Nurse's Aides duties are just as essential to the welfare of the patients and the smooth routine of the hospital.

Students Start Summer Sale of Victory Stamps

Joan Janda and her corps of assistants will carry on this summer with the sale of stamps and bonds to students of the Carmel schools. The first sale was held at the post office on Thursday of this week, and the table with students at work will be a regular Thursday feature for the rest of the summer. Students are urged to continue with their regular purchases, which amounted to more than $300 per week during the past school term.

Students who will assist Joan with the stamp sale include Pat Davis, Ester van Niel, Barbara Myler, Ann Bates, Alicia Orcutt, Nancy Fitzbaugh, Joan Dekker, Diane Tait, Barbara Josselyn, Ann Hodgson, Janet Strasburger, DuVal Roberts, Betty Dougherty, Jo Ann Zimmerman, Mary Gregory, and Ann Gambee.

There will be a contest between Sunset school and Carmel high school. Joan's committee has made a poster showing two thermometers, one for each school. This will be posted in the post office, so that the town can watch the contest.

THE DOWDELLS ARRIVING

This month will find Rev. Charles A. Dowdell, Mrs. Dowdell and Timmy, the scotty, established for the summer in their home on Santa Fe street, after spending the winter in Phoenix, Arizona.

BOX C-1

Since the company newspaper Bill Irwin (Technical Sgt. W. H. Irwin) was editing, Chicken Feathers, is now defunct, we suggested that he might find outlet for his journalistic talents as The Pine Cone Cymbal war correspondent at the front (cactus front) at Davis-Monthan Field, Tucson, Arizona where he was last heard from. His answer, on air corps stationery, comes from Lowry Field, Colorado.

May 22, 1943

Dear Cooks:

I don't know about being the Pine Cone correspondent. I just read that a higher percentage of newspaper men than soldiers were killed in this war. Of course, there is more reason to kill them, and I shouldn't be surprised, but I find it hard to whip myself into a state where I'll deliberately walk into the line of fire of my own men to collect a story for the dear old Pine Cone. No Front Page in my veins.

I'm in Denver on a temporary teaching mission. Perhaps I should feel like a Franciscan father, as everything in the Army is a mission, everything but K. P. Don't have horror pictures of having to change my address stencil again. I'll soon be home in my nest of cactus. Nor will I demand that you change your stencil to Technical Sergeant Irwin, though that is the new and present status on my dizzy climb to be commander-in-chief.

I flew up here with a detail of men in a flight of B-24s. To the millions of air corps men, that ain't nothin', but to a dust digging engineer, it's quite an experience. In our far-sighted manner, we left hot Tucson in sun tans, and not long out were traveling over snow, going up to 20,000 ft. to cross mountains where the storm was breaking. When we dropped down on a port to pick up a load of bombs they had to chip us out with ice picks. The ground crew had gone "home." Somehow, the air corps always seems to be somewhere else. We had to load the eggs. The engineers to the rescue again. The bombardier and seem to remember exactly how the catches worked. It all didn't help my internal quietude.

The other night I went into Denver and bought a coil of wire for some work we were doing. Soldier-like, I didn't choose to return to camp immediately on completion of my "mission." A coil of wire in these priority times fascinates even people who never before were wire-conscious; but a coil of wire in the hands of a soldier attracts more attention than Lady Godiva's white horse. After a while I entered into the spirit of the affair, but the odd thing is that the women would move on after they had satisfied their curiousity about the wire—

Lieut. Cranston, who received his commission on December 2, 1942, reporting for special training on February 24, is the son of Mrs. Helen W. C. Cranston, Carmel. His father is Major Harry Dow Cranston of Pasadena and the Army Air Force.

The Leatherneck is a graduate of Princeton University, and Princeton's graduate college in architecture. He also studied French and Spanish.

He was born in Manila, P. I., on August 24, 1918.

Lt. Jerome Davis Language Expert On Guadalcanal

Promotion of Jerome D. Davis, Carmel, Calif., to the rank of first lieutenant, was announced in a War Department release.

Lieutenant Davis is assigned as a Japanese language expert on Guadalcanal, Solomon Islands. He was born in Tokyo and lived there for many years while his father, J. Merle Davis, secretary, Department of Social and Religious Research, International Missionary Council, New York City, was stationed in Japan.

A graduate of Oberlin College, Oberlin, O., Lieutenant Davis later returned to Japan. He was employed there from 1930 to 1941 by the Standard-Vacuum Oil Co., and was then transferred to Singapore, where he remained until February 1942.

Fatal Wedding Plays Only Sat.

"The Fatal Wedding," the happy, gay success now running at the First Theatre, Monterey, will play only once this week-end, on Saturday night, June 12. The reason for the dropping of the Sunday evening performance is that the Troupers of the Gold Coast are going to San Jose to see "Life with Father," the New York stage play which the Denny-Watrous Management is presenting in the auditorium there on next Sunday evening, June 13.

Irene Alexander, director of "The Fatal Wedding," cannot be congratulated too often for the incomparable evening's entertainment furnished by "The Fatal Wedding" and its attending twelve act olio at the First Theatre, State Monument, Monterey.

THE YOUNG MENDELSSOHN AND OLD BACH

By ELOISE CARWYLE

In mid-July on that evening when the first lovely choral echoed through the forest and I joined the eager, expectant throng of villagers moving happily toward the sound that was heralding another Bach Festival at Carmel-by-the-Sea, I thought of our great debt to Felix Mendelssohn. I was reminded of another gathering, hundreds of people threading their way through the streets of Berlin in March of 1829, all moving toward the concert hall of the Akademie where they were to hear Bach's St. Matthew Passion. And this performance was under the direction of Mendelssohn, then just twenty years old.

The modern reverence for Bach and the recognition of his genius stem from that hour.

For a hundred years the work had lain silent, forgotten. Not since old Bach himself had performed it with his own choir in his own church at Leipzig had its notes been heard. Nor had anything else by the master been heard. A few musicologists knew the great scores in manuscript. The general public that listened to music had never heard of them. The Singakademie, a group of three or four hundred voices, was unaware of the existence in their library of his work.

At that time, Carl Friedrich Zelter, Mendelssohn's instructor in harmony and counterpoint, was director of the Singakademie. He recognized the worth of the Passion; he knew it was a masterpiece, and brought it to the attention of his gifted pupil. From the very first Felix loved it. He studied the score until he knew every note. He carried it complete in his mind, and later accompanied all the early rehearsals at the piano entirely from memory. The whole family was interested in it—that delightful family Mendelssohn, all animated by a lively intellectual curiosity and a burning love of music. Grandmother Mendelssohn, wishing to give Felix what would afford him the greatest pleasure, gained permission to have the manuscript copied and presented it to him as a Christmas gift. That was in 1823.

Four years later, Felix organized a group of sixteen singers who met once every week to study the score. Among them was his friend, Eduard Devrient, singer and actor, who shared his enthusiasm and who, we suspect, had something to do with the inception of the larger project. Certainly he encouraged Felix to propose the production of the work by the Singakademie. Mendelssohn's mind was filled with the idea and his heart was set upon it; but he was very young and stood somewhat in awe of his old instructor. His confidence needed bolstering; and doubtless he was glad to have Devrient accompany him when he went to beard Zelter in his den.

His sister Fanny, in a letter to their friend, Karl Klingemann, then in London, has left us a delightful picture of the two young men at that time. "Felix and Devrient," she writes, "had talked for a long time of a possible performance, but the plan had no definite form until one evening at our house they made up their minds, and walked off the next morning in brand new yellow kid gloves (they thought those important) to the managers of the Akademie." We can imagine the interview with Zelter: two eager young men, deferential and very polite, laying the rather astounding plan before the distinguished director; proposing to take over the Akademie—Zelter's Akademie!—introduce the work to its large chorus, rehearse singers and orchestra and, in due time, give a public performance, to be directed by Felix. And though Fanny tells us "they were very diplomatic in their approach," it is not surprising that Zelter expostulated at first and did considerable growling. It really was a bold idea. We get the impression that Felix might have retired in submission had he not been strongly supported by Devrient, who refused to be intimidated. Devrient continued to argue, but with a nice injection of subtle flattery. Finally Zelter was won over by their youthful enthusiasm. He did the generous thing and consented to a performance with Mendelssohn as conductor.

They walked on air. I can hear them going over the details of the interview. They shudder as they recall that moment when Felix put his hand upon the doorknob, about to begin a retreat; then they break into laughter and boyish glee over their final triumph. Spirits soar as they discuss their plans. Albert Schweitzer tells us "they remarked in front of the Opera House how wonderful it was that the Passion should again come to light exactly a hundred years after its first performance under Bach, and that an actor and a young Jew should be accountable for it."

Rehearsals began immediately. After recovering from their first surprise, the members of the Akademie became deeply interested in the work. They felt all the joy of true artists in recreating something which they recognized as a masterpiece of tonal design springing from a spiritual idea. There was a cumulation of happiness and enthusiasm as rehearsals progressed. They had been touched by the flame of Mendelssohn's exaltation. The excitement was intense. Their delight was communicated to all whom they met during those days of devotion to the perfecting of their performance. All Berlin was expectant. The house was sold out, and hundreds of ticket seekers were turned away.

At last the day arrived, a great day in the history of western music. Crowds gathered to await the opening of the doors. During the concert there was utter quietness. Fanny tells Klingemann "Devrient sang the recitatives most beautifully," and "the choruses were sung with a fire, a striking power, and also with a touching delicacy and softness the like of which I have never heard except at the second concert, when they surpassed themselves." And she adds: Felix had then, as ever after, the quality of inspiring both performers and audience. The composition, the singers, the orchestra, the audience were somehow welded into a complete musical experience. The performance was called a perfect success. That day they made great music and the sound of it has been echoing and re-echoing down the years.

And thus was Bach revealed to the world. Fanny writes: "What used to be a dream, to be realized in the distant future, has now come true; the Passion has been heard in public, and now belongs to the world." It was the beginning of the Bach revival.

On opening nights of our own Bach Festival, I have imagined Johann Sebastian and Felix stepping out of their dead centuries and appearing at the portals of Sunset Auditorium, having heard from far-away the sound of trombones in familiar chorals, heralding—they knew not what. Old Bach is amazed. Can it be that all these people—these villagers, their friends, visitors and distinguished musicians from afar have come just to hear and perform his music? Mendelssohn's face is alight with interest. Together they pass through the foyer and pause at the south entrance. Their eyes sweep over the great hall with its Gothic arches and vaulting, then to the stage where two symmetrical young pines, one on either side, lift aspiring tips in perfect harmony with the Gothic line of the proscenium arch. "Ah, the pine trees! Like my own Thuringia!" exclaims old Bach. Mendelssohn's great dark eyes observe everything. He sees much, and perceives more. Usigli lifts his baton. The dark eyes are focussed now. The first notes of a Bach concerto float out upon the air. And no one in that listening multitude is so supremely happy so filled with joy, as Felix Mendelssohn.

POETRY

OF A CERTAIN PARIS STREET—NAZI WINTER

Odd arabesques now cover old facades
That crumbled with fatigue in summer time;
Across this spindly bridge there slowly plods
A silent country man . . . stern pantomime!
The bridge is sentinelled by lamposts, stark
And black against new-fallen snow—each thud
Of things too-alien: hoof-beats without spark,
Quick steps of white faced Mimis through the mud—
These sounds beat requiems into my soul. . .
I thirst for chestnuts green-leaved in the spring,
And children dancing some mad Carmagnole;
I thirst—I beg—for all but this sad thing:

Yes! anything but this: the sturdy dread
With which my neighbors walk—like people dead. . . .

—LIRREL STARLING

ALVARADO STREET WHARF

Out of the gray streaming dawn
the last lone pelican folds his ragged wings, grins advisedly
and dagger-dives the shiny satin bay, coming up with the fresh morning like a silver sardine, in his bill.

—D. L. EMBLEN, U. S. N.

TO A BOY SINGING IN CHURCH

You sing you know not what, and from that wondrous throat
Soars music not your own.
And with the heavenly song a thousand hearts
Rise to a realm of peace ineffable.

O cease not! for your notes float like the perfume
Of a censer swinging at the feet of God!

—CHARLES BALLARD

HOUSE HUNTING

Does it have a leaded pane
To catch the beat of midnight rain?
Does it have a patch of sky
Framed for watching clouds drift by?

Could it boast a pansy bed
By a sunny pathway spread?
Will it sound of rustling trees
When doorways open for the breeze?

Does laughter echo through the room
Where hearthstones shine from brush of broom?
Is it free of ghostly fears;
But stored with wisdom gained through tears?

Lil Warble of Shirt Tail Gulch Stars at Canteen

The Barn Door Canteen, the regular Saturday evening feature of the Carmel USO which had its gala inauguration on May 22nd, again wowed a capacity audience of 500 service men this past Saturday.

Innovation of the week, provided by its enthusiastic and original sponsors, Mrs. James Cooke and Lee Crowe, was the Angels' Roost. A seat in this coveted enclosure, with a beauteous white robe and sparkling gold halo to boot, is limited to seven civilians (exclusive of hostesses) per performance, who make their reservations by calling Carmel 72 and pay their way in with two dozen doughnuts. Occupying places in Angels' Roost on Saturday evening were Mr. Warren Atherton, chairman of national defense for the American Legion, just back from a tour of the battlefronts; Miss Gladys Young, of the Stage Door Canteen in San Francisco; Noel Sullivan, whose contributions during the past year to the Carmel USO have won him the title of Doughnut King; Mrs. T. B. Wilson, wife of Brigadier General Wilson, now serving on the staff of General MacArthur; Mrs. Fred Sloane; Mrs. Joseph McEldowney and Mrs. Jane Purvis.

The floor show was an unqualified success. Corporal Clifford Johnston, the artist who painted murals in the Presidio chapel, made highly entertaining lantern slides for the first number, a group of songs rendered in the manner of 1910 by Rachel Morton: Beautiful Dreamer, Down by the Old Mill Stream and You Are My Sunshine. Interspersed with the slides were such nostalgic captions as "Ladies Under 45 Are Requested to Remove Their Hats," "A Baby is Crying in the Lobby—is it Yours?" etc. Rachel Morton, wearing a Stetson hat, was introduced by Mrs. Cooke, the Mistress of Ceremonies, as Lil Warble of Shirt Tail Gulch.

Carol Lynn entertained with a Portuguese dance number, followed by another group of songs by Miss Morton, including Summertime and White Cliffs of Dover. Lieutenant Charles Thomas of the Amphibian Engineers, impersonated denizens of Times Square in a clever monologue; Betty Carr did a comedy clog dance, June Delight II played the spoons and Bob Bratt gave his famous impersonations of Quen Victoria taking a bath and the Chinaman on Burma Road. The program concluded with a tap dance by Carol Lynn. Miss Ethel Kinsey was accompanist for the evening.

Tiger skins and other hunting trophies loaned by Henry Dickinson, western souvenirs loaned by Fred Bechdolt and soap murals by Franklin Dixon ornamented the bar, where hostesses disguised behind bristling moustaches served their guests.

Sandwiches, cake and coffee, provided by the Church of the Wayfarer, a magnificent cake presented by the Dolores Bakery, and doughnuts galore were dispensed.

strange. I couldn't understand it.

I am still in a bit of a daze. A while ago I was looking over some form cards of some of the men when I ran across one who stated that his occupation was, "dust collector." I developed a very comfortable picture of him sitting in a corner guyed up with cobwebs and garnished with mice and moths only to have my picture shattered on reading under recreation: "skiing down hill for two years."

Whoops, there I go, too.

Ed. Note: Mrs. Willis G. White received another letter this week from Pvt. William Chinn, a Carmel Chinese boy serving in the American Army. His last letter, which was printed in the Pine Cone Cymbal, came from a training camp in Washington. This communication, a V-mail letter, comes from somewhere in the Pacific where he is now on active duty.

May 19, 1943

Dear Mrs. White:

I received your letter and the handkerchief with my name on it. Thank you very much. It makes me feel very happy that you think of me when I'm so far across the sea. We are now in the Southwest Pacific on an island of which there are many. This one that we are on is a very pretty one with lovely green vegetation of every sort, also nice streams and mountains. We go bathing and can wash our clothes if we care to. We also have a laundry, and can send them there, free of charge, only it takes a little time, so lots of us prefer to do our own when we have the time.

I really enjoy this island very much as it is not too hot or too cold, sort of semi-tropical just nice. All of these islands have their share of rain, more so than we have there in California, but not as steady.

There are several kinds of peoples here, natives and whites of different races, so the language is a little mixed up. But they all sem to know the money without much difficulty, especially when you want to buy something from them.

Well, Mrs. White, I've told you about as much as they will allow me to about where I am. They are very strict about what we mention in our letters.

Hoping that you are well and happy,

Your friend,
William Chinn

P. S. Give my friends my very best regards.

Japs Will Not Return Here; Outland Says

In a letter to the Pine Cone Cymbal, George Outland, congressman from this district, scotches the rumor that the Japanese interned in camps in the interior will be returned to California for agricultural work. He says:

"Your representative has checked carefully with the War Relocation Authority and has positive assurance that this will not take place. Any such move would first have to receive the specific sanction of the United States War Department, and there is not the slightest indication that such sanction is contemplated."

On the possibility of exchanging prisoners with the Japanese:

"Our eleventh district has an unusually high number of service men held prisoner by Japan, most of them captured when the Philippines fell. Your representative has been in touch with both the War Department and the State Department, attempting to secure action for the exchange of these boys. Thus far, the Japanese government has refused to exchange able-bodied prisoners, but the government of this country is continuing to press the matter strongly."

It's Captain instead of Lieut. Robert Spencer now, and he has news of Don Blanding.

Camp Wallace, Texas,
May 25, 1943

Dear Pine Cone Staff:

I'm on the move again, but this time, it is not so far. I'm being transferred to Camp Hulen, about 100 miles west of Camp Wallace. My new station is about the worst of the lot in Texas. It is said to be five feet above sea level, right on the Gulf of Mexico—and, at times when a tropical hurricane blows in, the camp is actually IN the Gulf. I'll be able to tell more about it next week.

Had a grand session with Don Blanding about three weeks ago. He was doing a talk in Dallas, Texas, and wired me to meet him in Houston. We had dinner together and spent the night jabbering like a pair of magpies. Don had several talks booked enroute to Hollywood, and from there on, his plans were indefinite. His only hope is to spend his time from now on—on the West Coast. He was bubbling over with the prospects of being again where he could breathe. You can expect him to pop into the Pine Cone office one of these days.

My promotion was here for me when I returned from Carmel. It seems so long since I had those glorious twelve days at home ,that it was just a pleasant dream. I'm already looking forward to another leave, but I know it won't be this year.

Please change the address on your records to that of my new station.

Best regards,
Bob Spencer

AWVS Needs Chairs

The AWVS offices at 412 Tyler street, Monterey, donated by Mark Keller, are very much in need of chairs, a couch and a rug. Anyone having such articles and willing to donate same should telephone Monterey 5492. Since the AWVS is this month inaugurating a new service, that of sewing on buttons and changing chevrons for soldiers and sailors, men not so handy with the needle, comfortable chairs for the many who troop in are urgently in demand.

In the odd moments between sewing on buttons, the local organization is not doing so badly with its war bond selling. The Carmel committee, under Mrs. Robert Doolittle last month sold $775 worth of bonds and stamps in the Carmel Theatre, and just last week, one member of the committee in one evening sold $2,700 worth of bonds.

Martinez-Du Casse Wedding Plans

The engagement of Micaela Martinez, daughter of the late Xavier Martinez and Mrs. Elsie Martinez of Carmel, to Ralph Du Casse of Cincinnati, was announced this week.

The wedding, which will take place at the Carmel Mission early in August, is the culmination of a romance which began while Ralph Du Casse was stationed last year at the Monterey Presidio with that popular and long-remembered cavalry regiment. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs. R. R. Du Casse of Cincinnati, Ohio, and with his parents, both of whom are natives of France, spent much of his early youth in travel abroad. His great uncle was Roger Du Casse, contemporary and friend of Ravel, student of the noted Gabriel Faure, and himself a noted French composer of symphonic poems, concertos and chorales. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati, where he completed two years of premedical work, studied art and found time to follow his interest in musical composition.

Several decorative drawings of horse's heads by Ralph Du Casse were among the interesting exhibits of Soldiers' Art held at the Carmel gallery on July 16 of last year, and both lyrics and music by him contributed to the success of "Route Order," the service men's show produced during his stay on the Peninsula. He is now stationed at the Presidio in San Francisco, in the medical corps.

Dr. and Mrs. Du Casse expect to come West for the wedding, at which Lieutenant Bill Yeisley of Cincinnati, former fellow cavalryman of the groom, will be best man and Mrs. June Hass, well-known sculptress of Berkeley, will be the bride's attendant.

More definite wedding plans await the progress of Micaela's present commission, the mural decoration of the new Navy chapel on Treasure Island.

Visitors are cordially invited to share the hour of worship with us. The service begins at eleven.

linquency.

Action on the part of local authorities is necessary because, though the publications are barred passage through the mails, they arrive by truck and are so distributed to the newsstands.

Mayor P. A. McCreery said that it was regrettable that the petition did not reach him sooner. It was impossible to act on it immediately as it involves legal study and moral obligations that the council would have to treat delicately. He instructed City Attorney Peter Ferrante to give the matter study, promising that the petition would come up for action at the next regular meeting of the council.

The petition was prepared and circulated by the Monterey Peninsula Council of Church Women in conjunction with the Ministerial Association of the Peninsula. It was pointed out that had individuals rather than organizations been solicited, the number of signatures would have been vastly greater. Organizations signing the petition through their officers were:

Monterey Peninsula Ministerial Association, Vincent H. Coletta, president; Carmel Mission Altar Society, Elsie Martinez; Carmel Mission, Michael D. O'Connell; Junipero Serra Mothers' Club, Gertrude M. Stoney; Pacific Grove Parent-Teacher Ass'n., Mabel B. Merritt; Monterey Walter Colton P.-T.A., Mrs. H. Wingard; Bay View School P.-T.A., M. T. Joseph; Carmel P.-T.A.; E. M. Seifert, Carmel P.-T.A., Mrs. W. B. Waddle; Oak Grove P.-T.A., Mrs. Ivan Cox; Monterey Peninsula Girl Scouts, Mrs. John Gratiot; Lighthouse Club of Pacific Grove, R. E. Sandholdt; American Association of University Women, Frances Whitehead; Soroptimist Club of Monterey Peninsula, Teresa Lloyd; Women's Christian Temperance Union, Lena Smith Estill; Monterey Peninsula Council of Church Women, Mrs. F. E. Bancroft.

Accompanying the petition was a letter from Col. Roger Fitch, commandant of Fort Ord, expressing his approval and urging its adoption.

Similar petitions are to be presented to the city councils of Monterey and Pacific Grove.

hate to see him go. It is as if one of Carmel's traditions were moving out."

The mayor then announced that the town was fortunate in having been able to get the services of Harry Hilbert to fill the vacancy created by Taylor's resignation.

Immediately after taking the oath of office administered by City Clerk Peter Mawdsley, and receiving the congratulation of the city council, Hilbert left the meeting to get home to his young son who is ill.

He came to Carmel in June, 1929 from Hawthorne, California, where he was assistant cashier in the local bank. He has also worked in a bank in Fresno, where he attended McKay Business College and Fresno State College.

Here he married Dorothy Benson and they have a home on Junipero street where he indulges his hobby for gardening. He is also active in the Masonic lodge, as he is a Past Master of the Carmel organization.

In commenting on his appointment, Hilbert said, "Taylor has been a very good treasurer and I'll have to be on my toes to do as good a job as he has."

aircraft fire in places—but not enough to worry us."

Part of his job was machine gun strafing of the German and Italian lines.

"A fellow has no time to think in the middle of action," he explained. "You go on your reflexes. Sometimes you figure you've been out ten minutes, and find it's been two hours. You hardly realize anything, until afterwards."

He saw and talked to many war prisoners.

"The Italians were tickled to death," he reports, "but the Germans were different. And most of them were awfully young."

One German pilot with whom he talked, spoke scornfully, and in excellent English. "All right," he sneered, "You think you've done something! But how about the wreckage our bombings have left in New York? We've bombed every great American city on the Atlantic Coast."

"I told him he was all wet about that," said Gus, "but do you think I could make him believe me? He seemed like a very intelligent sort of a chap, too, but he kept right on insisting that I'd just been kept in ignorance of all the damage Germany had done in the U.S.A."

Pilot Weiser hitch hiked his way via cargo plane to the West Coast from Miami, catching a ride to St. Louis, then on to Salt Lake, and so home for a brief leave while he awaits further orders.

Newspaper Men To Hold Meet At Stanford

PALO ALTO, Calif.—With the double theme of "Wartime Editorial Problems" and "How Newspapers Can Assist the War Effort," the sixth annual C.N.P.A. Editors' conference will convene for a one-day session on Saturday, June 19.

The head of one of the principal government agencies in Washington has been invited to tell the editors what the government thinks they can do to promote the war effort.

Roundtables for both dailies and weeklies will consider the best use they can make of newsprint and zinc under wartime conditions. Other wartime editorial problems will also be included.

Stanford University will not be able to house the editors this year due to the demands of the army and the shortage of domestic help. This fact accounts for the one-day session. It is anticipated that those coming from a distance will make early reservations at hotels in Palo Alto, San Francisco, and San Jose.

Chairman of the conference this year is Kenneth S. Conn of the San Jose Mercury-Herald, Committee members are James R. Boothe, San Rafael Independent; Anne Frahme Brubaker, San Mateo Times; Paul R. Leake, Woodland Democrat; Neal Van Sooy, Azusa Herald; and Maitland Henry, Livermore Herald.

Less Tax Money For County

State Controller Harry B. Riley today apportioned $37,434.11 in gasoline tax money to Monterey county as part of a $9,535,681 distribution for the quarter ending last March 31. This county's share was computed on the basis of a motor vehicle registration of 26,126.

Controller Riley said the appointment was $4,748,025 or 33.24 per cent less than that for the corresponding quarter last year. The county's revenue from this source is continuing to feel the effects of decreasing gasoline sales.

Riley distributed one third of the $9,535,681 to the counties and deposited the balance of $1,589,280 in the State Highway Fund for later apportionment to cities and for use on the state highway system.

First man from the Monterey Peninsula to report to the U. S. Pre-Flight School as an aviation cadet is H. E. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Smith, Carmel. With Smith in the Eighth Battalion are two men from Salinas—R. E. Foster and H. W. Sgheiza.

Cadet Smith was graduated from the Monterey Union High School and attended Salinas Junior College and the University of California at Los Angeles. He has 72 hours of flying instruction as the result of training at Salinas and Salt Lake City.

Cadet Sgheiza, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Sgheiza, 242 Riker street, Salinas, earned football, basketball and track letters while attending Salinas High School and has had 36 hours of flight training. Before receiving his call from the Navy, he worked for the Voss Motor Company.

Cadet Foster is the son of Mrs. Sarah C. Foster, 185 Riker Terrace Way, Salinas, and was graduated from Salinas High School. He has 30 hours of flight training at a War Training Service School.

The men reported at the Del Monte school last week and will receive a strenuous 3-month training course in physical fitness, academic and military maneuvers before being graduated in August to a Naval Air Station for primary flight training.

Marion Operetta Opens on Broadway After Boston Run

"And So to Bed," the operetta for which George F. Marion, Jr., son of Carmel's George Marion and brother of Ruth Marion McElroy, wrote the book and lyrics, will open in New York on June 16th at the Broadhurst Theatre, after a three weeks' run in Boston.

To quote the review in the Boston Traveler: "Richard Kollmar's production of the musical 'And So to Bed,' a fairy tale for grown-ups now playing at the Shubert Theatre, has the ingredients which should guarantee success on Broadway."

The musical score is by Thomas ("Fats") Waller, the well-known pianist, soloist and band leader, and leading roles are sung by Richard Kollmar, producer, and Muriel Angelus.

Helen Gahagan Speaks Before Democratic Club

Miss Helen Gahagan, Democratic National Committeewoman, is in Carmel and spoke Wednesday before a group of men and women at the Sunset school auditorium.

The meeting was preceded by a luncheon at Normandy Inn, given in Miss Gahagan's honor by the executive committee of the Democratic Women's Club.

A recent trip to Washington was the inspiration of Miss Gahagan's talk which included not only a vivid picture of the wheels going around in the Capital but the whole country. She pictured dramatically and vividly the miracle that has been performed in less than a year and a half by a people unprepared for the bombs on Pearl Harbor.

Miss Gahagan's visit in Washington increased her concern for our choice of representatives and congratulated Carmel on the election of George Outland who has, according to the speaker, voted right on every occasion and had the courage to speak out against what she termed strangely high handed practices which are followed in the House in dealing with recent legislation. —S.
